

went in for real estate and ranching in British Columbia on an extensive scale.

In the year 1860 he and his wife and children left London and settled at Datchet Lodge, Datchet, near Windsor, where they resided until 1870 when they moved to Bristol House, Roehampton.

On the 5th February 1897 his wife Emma Amelia Galpin passed away, leaving a family of thirteen children, four sons and nine daughters. She was buried at Putney Vale Cemetery, and a very fine memorial was erected to her memory in the churchyard at Roehampton, which was designed by her eldest son, William Dixon Galpin, and executed by Mr. George Frampton, A.R.A., afterwards Sir George Frampton, R.A.

Shortly after the loss of his wife Thomas Dixon Galpin left Bristol House and moved to 1 Palace Houses, Kensington Gardens, where he remained until his death on the 25th April 1910, being buried beside his wife at Putney Vale Cemetery at the age of eighty-one.
